Pledged to neither Sect nor Party,
But established for the benefit of all.

FRIDAY, AUG. 30, 1889.

The taking down of the wall has proved to outside observation that the Palace grounds have been poorly kept. Mr. Dole, in his place in the Legislature a few sessions back, complained of the neglected state of the royal park.

Since the storm of Thursday evening a large pool of water stands on Queen, above Alakea street. This shows how the tramway acts as a dam in that place. Possibly the same cause and effect are elsewhere revealed by the incident of the little freshet. During a prolonged season of rain these results would be much more damaging. There should be culverts inserted at all such crossings to carry away the water.

TWO SIDES OF THE TRUST.

A late issue of the New York World devotes its first page to a representation of "The Two Sides of the Sugar Trust." This effort consists not of abstract discussion of the right of such combinations as the Sugar Trust, or to ascertain their exact position in the science of political economy. It simply gives across the upper half of the page a sketch of the grandeur with which Theodore H. Havemeyer, the head of the Trust, has surrounded himself by means of his profits from sugar; then, on the lower half, a description of the poor living of working people, made worse by the enhanced cost of sugar and other necessities through the greedy operations of such capitalists as Havemeyer. The latter's wealth is placed at from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000, with the probability of coming nearer the higher than the lower figure. He lives in princely style in New York in winter and at Newport in summer, besides having a country seat and fancy stock farm on a grand scale in New Jersey. Possibly the representation of the two sides as made by the World may not be wholly just, but it cannot fail to be very effective in its influence upon the popular mind.

THOROUGH EDUCATION.

A good story, none the less so because its truth is vouched for, has just been told the writer. Lately a young lad from the Punahou school went to Oakland, Cal., to further prosecute the unroyal road. Making his appearance before Mr. McChesney, principal of the high school there, the young scholar was asked by that functionary how far advanced he was. As to arithmetic the boy replied that he was in decimals. The principal expressed a little surprise at the professed attainment of a boy of this one's age, and to test him asked if he could tell what was the half of one-fourth. This taking the lad by surprise confused him and he said he did not know. "Oh, they are not thorough down in Honolulu; I will find your proper place," remarked the Oakland educator. The foregoing is one-half of the story. The other half is more interesting, displaying what is known as a "turning of the tables." A young lad fresh from Mr. McChesney's institution of "thorough" learning at Oakland came to Honolulu for his vacation. He was met on the street by a gentleman, who happened to be aware of the setback of the Punahou boy at Oakland, and was stopped with the question, "What is the half of one-fourth?" The lad promptly confessed that he did not know. A second scholar from the same institution was met later and interrogated with the formidable question used as a test by the head master at his school, but it floored him as effectually as it had done both the other boys. Probably any of the lads if allowed to look at the simple problem a few moments would have been able to give the correct answer. The whole case, however, shows how easily a person may condemn others on evidence that exists equally against himself.

Gretchen—Your poor cat died this morning, ma'am. Madam—Poor, poor thing! What have you done with her? Gretchen—Nothing, ma'am; but I've put all the kittens in mourning.

Sensible Girl—Evangeline—Now, George, you are going up in the blinding district, won't you do me one favor? George—Certainly, dearest; what is it? Evangeline—Do take out an accident policy.

DR. DWINELL'S LETTER.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—As the Rev. Dr. I. E. Dwinell is not here to answer for himself to the strictures of Col. Ashford upon his letter to the S. F. Bulletin about the Wilcox insurrection, I ask leave to present some explanation in his behalf. On the evening of August 1st, before the sailing of the Australia, Dr. Dwinell, at his room at the Eagle House, asked me to listen to an account of the affair which he had written for a San Francisco paper, and suggest any amendments. I remember suggesting only one of any importance, which was to add an emphatic statement that the emigrants were suppressed without calling in any foreign aid, meaning thereby military assistance from a man-of-war. I have no doubt that this was exactly what Dr. Dwinell intended by the expression "without the active participation of foreigners." Of course he did not mean "white men," for he says above, "Soon the Government called out the Rifles—four companies of white drilled sharpshooters, consisting of about four hundred originally, but much reduced. About one hundred responded at once, who were stationed in the Opera House and other buildings overlooking the Palace grounds."

I thought the Government was entitled to have this fact—of calling in no foreign aid—emphasized in reports sent abroad. I had already emphasized this in a Friend editorial, also the fact, according to my personal observation, that "the Hawaiian population remained absolutely quiet." The same appears in juxtaposition with the former idea in Dr. Dwinell's letter, and may also have been inserted at my request—I do not now remember.

I think Dr. Dwinell, a stranger unaccustomed to our familiar use of the word "foreigner," may be pardoned for employing it inaccurately. In general it may be held that inaccuracies in early reports made amid conflicting evidence are entitled to great indulgence. I felt very thankful that so eminent and venerated a gentleman as Dr. Dwinell should report our troubles so well and so favorably to us.

In regard to Dr. Dwinell's incidental reference to Col. Ashford's tender of legal aid to Wilcox as "a curious fact," I am sure that he was wholly innocent of any thought of connecting the Colonel with "the mystery of this revolutionary attempt" which appeared in the next sentence, although it is in a next paragraph, which indicates that the two thoughts were disconnected in the writer's mind. The statement about the Colonel made no impression on myself at the time, as it was in accord with general remark. For myself I had felt very grateful to Col. Ashford and the Rifles for their services, and had not thought particularly ill of him for offering his services to Wilcox, although it may have seemed a little odd.

The two sentences about Wilcox's lawyer, and about the mystery, should not have been printed in juxtaposition, but in separate paragraphs, as they originally appeared in the S. F. Bulletin. I am anxious that Col. Ashford should kindly note that particular.

I would not question the accuracy of Col. Ashford's statement that "several were arrested on the streets during the day for haranguing crowds of natives in seditious language." The fact is new to me. I witnessed only good order in the streets, although here and there a good deal. Of course Col. A.'s means of information were incomparably better than my own. About the statement that Wilcox "knew he was a doomed man," I never heard it until Dr. Dwinell read it to me, and was not prepared to contradict it. It seemed of no great consequence anyway.

As to the fact of a "mystery" existing as to the parties back of the affair, Col. Ashford may be fully posted. We outsiders and "non-combatants" know less about it, and have to await developments. Of course we hear many reports, and conflicting ones. But there is still some mystery, and we have to say, "we do not know," although we may make guesses. Meantime I venture to express the hope that all true men will stand together, and work together for the common security.

HAWAII FOR HEALTH.

(Hilo Record, Aug. 20.)

That the climate of these islands as a general thing is remarkably healthy is an undisputed fact. To those living in colder climates, who visit our shores for their health, it brings a new lease of life. But it is not so much for those who visit us, that these thoughts are formed, but for those whose homes are on our shores. Most of the foreigners residing here are living at or near the sea coast, and year after year dwelling in this warm climate without change. This is sure to tell on their general health. A change to a cooler climate is necessary. And we have on these islands the sanitarium needed. Anywhere at an altitude of five or six thousand feet above the sea, a cool dry atmosphere is to be found. One of the finest places we know of is on the windward slope of Maunakea directly back of the town of Hilo. Here just above the line of the heavy forest is a tract of fine open country, with a most delightful and invigorating climate. The air is dry and cool and life-giving. To prove its dryness, we would state, that on the flow of 1855-6, over thirty years ago, large trees are now lying, that were cut down by the said flow. These to-day are almost as sound as the day they fell. While a few miles below, the same sized trees are completely rotted through. In the summer the thermometer at sunrise and sunset stands about on an average of 60° Fahrenheit, while at noon it reaches 70-75. During the fall and winter months, frost is to be seen every clear night and often ice forms on the water pails, during the northerly blow. A good wood fire is a necessity almost every evening in the year. Water is plenty and forage for animals the best. Horseback exercise in the early morning on the mountain side is invigorating; while to those delighting in hunting, the wild hogs and cattle in the woods offer a splendid opportunity for such sport. Quail abound everywhere, and during the season plover and duck are to be found. The wild native raspberries and ohelos abound. Potatoes and the different grains can be raised easily. For those needing a change from a warm to a cool climate, this is just the place to go. While all those suffering from lung complaint, if not too far gone, a few months' residence will work almost surely a cure. We have in mind now a man who was far gone with consumption, who decided to try the chances there. He took up the business of killing the wild cattle for their hides and lived in a small shanty. At first he was hardly able to walk out far enough to get a bullock, but in a few months he was able to run down a flock of wild cattle and get a fair lot out of the number. And before the year was out, he was apparently completely cured. A gentleman now living at Kalahua, went there very much troubled with his lungs. The last time we saw him his cough had almost entirely left him, he was fleshing up, and to all appearances was a well man.

Now, that is the climate we have up there and it only needs a good road up to the place and a good hotel put up there to become a place of great resort. To get to it two routes are open. First, by way of Waimea and Mana, the other by way of Hilo. By the former there is now a fair carriage road from Kawaihae to within 15 miles of Launala or Puakala, while from Hilo there is only a horse trail. The distance from Hilo would be about 28 miles while from Kawaihae it is about 50. If the Government would put a road across from Hilo to Kena, it will take one right up to the place.

There is but little doubt, that if the route was opened and a good comfortable hotel put up there, under good management, that there would be a large number of visitors there, not only from our own country but from foreign lands. We wish that some of our capitalists would take the matter in hand. All the lumber necessary for such a place can be sawed out on the spot, from koa, ohia, and some of the other fine woods growing there so abundantly. And such a place could be run cheaply and not too heavy charges be made, so as to bring it within the reach of all.

Let us have our Mauna Kea sanitarium started as soon as possible.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO., OF NEW YORK

Is the Oldest Active Life Insurance Company in the United States and the Largest in the World!

Its assets Jan. 1st, 1889, amounted to $125,494,719. Its insurance in force was $482,125,184 and the computed Reserve Fund which with future premiums and interest is required for paying the same, at the maturity of the policies or the death of the assured, was $117,607,078, thus leaving a clear surplus for future dividends to policy holders of $7,887,639.

This Company has no capital stock. It is purely Mutual. All the accumulations belong to its members, and all the profits go to its policy holders who have received since 1863, the sum of $78,878,476.82 in dividends earned by their policies. In the same period it has also paid $88,480,963.57 in death claims; $24,669,604.45 in matured endowments and $594,548.27 in annuities to living members; and besides $68,599,139.66 have been allowed for the value of discontinued policies purchased by the Company. In all since 1863, $261,222,732.77 have been returned to policy holders.

This amount is Twice as Large as the returns made by any other life insurance company in the world during the period named.

An Investment Returning 6 Per Cent. Compound Interest.

To illustrate the point pertaining to the investment of funds and the return to the policy holder, the following illustration is given:

This is a statement of a single premium life policy issued by this company in 1863:

	Policy No. 28,342, Single Premium Life, Age 38, Premium $4,077.00.	1863.
Amount $10,000.
Face of Policy.....		$10,000 00
Additions Credited.....		$7,716 57
Additions Surrendered.....		1,548 97
Balance of Additions.....		6,168 00
Present Value of Policy as a Claim.....		$16,168 00
Premium.....		$4,077 00
Cash Dividends Withdrawn.....		939 34
Net Amount Paid by Insured.....		3,137 66
Value as a Claim in Excess of Amount Paid.....		$13,030 34

The existing additions amount to nearly 200 per cent. of the net amount paid by the insured, and the insured has realized 6 per cent. compound interest on his investment.

With conditions quite as favorable to them as to the Mutual, no one of its would-be rivals has ever equaled this result.
